THE STORY

We furnished RDL Architects' new office space. The furniture they selected for their interior designers embraced the new benching concept with additional low storage. This open station layout allows for more collaboration among designers for some seated, concentrated work provided with privacy screens. The Architectural area was furnished with more standard panel system stations. Low panels, only 42"H, created privacy while still maintaining the light and open concept they shaped. RDL has a very modern interior with a lot of crisp white walls, which was mimicked in the furniture with white work surfaces and white storage units.
