THE STORY

As a global sports marketing agency, rEvolution knows the importance of winning, no matter if it's in the office or on the field. When the organization relocated from the River North neighborhood to Fulton Market in Chicago, they were looking to translate this positive message within their new space.

Throughout this project, we worked hand-in-hand with Leopardo and Interior Architects to create rEvolution's new home. By utilizing custom furniture from Iron Age Office and implementing a sleek, modern design, we transformed their space into one that is representative of their brand and mission.

rEvolution CEO and Founder John Rowady commented on the redesign and the new location of their new office (as seen on their blog): "The office space tells our story and is a reflection of who we are. Culturally, we think moving into Fulton Market is the right choice for rEvolution because it's an area that will serve our current and future employees, clients and business partners well."

As a team, we were able to ensure that no detail was missed. Adorned with sports memorabilia and sleek finishes, this office is a grand slam.
